In 2005, a law was passed by the Arizona Legislature to appoint the School District Redistricting Commission to study Arizona's schools and make recommendations for creating unified districts out of the current set of 108 elementary school districts and 15 union districts. A unified district is one that is geographically defined and offers aligned curriculum for students Kindergarten through grade 12. In December 2007, the Commission formally presented its recommendations to Governor Napolitano.

The final report submitted to the Governor with recommendations including maps, data sheets, financial analysis, frequently asked questions, and other information can be found at <http://www.ade.az.gov/sdrc> along with research and additional information collected and posted throughout the Commission's two plus years of work.
